Dr. Marilyn Dunn received her Doctorate of Veterinary Medicine from the Université de Montréal in 1994 and did a one year internship at the small animal hospital of the Université de Montréal. In 1999, she completed a 3 year residency program in small internal medicine and a Master’s degree at the University of Saskatchewan. In 1999 she became a Diplomate of the American College of Veterinary Internal Medicine. Dr Dunn then worked in a private specialty practice in Montreal for 2 years. Since 2001, she is a professor of small animal medicine at the Université de Montréal in Saint-Hyacinthe. In 2008 she completed a Fellowship in interventional radiology and endoscopy at the University of Pennsylvania. Besides working at the small animal clinic, she teaches and is involved in a number of clinical studies involving urology and thrombosis. Since 2011, she had developed an interventional endoscopy service at Canada West Veterinary Specialists and Critical Care.

Dr. Caroline Brookfield graduated from the Ontario Veterinary College in 1997. Caroline started her career in Northern Florida in emergency and small animal medicine, and then took a year to travel before settling in Calgary as a small animal locum. Caroline has enjoyed small animal practice, emergency medicine, working at the Calgary Zoo, research, and teaching at the University of Calgary. A highlight was a locum in Saipan, Mariana Islands. In 2009, in response to the need for veterinary locums, Caroline began “Canada Locum” to match vets to locums, and a certificate in Business Management at the University of Calgary. Caroline joined Nestle Purina in May of 2012 and loves learning and sharing information about nutrition. She has two boys, two cats and a dog, and wishes she could have chickens.
